The Register -- Ohio Iron and Coal Company-their Attack of Mr. Leet.

We feel ourselves called upon, by an extraordinary offers in the Register of last week, to malign the motives and acts of Mr. Leet, in his absence, to de-No e a little space to the above named subjects.

And first, though not least in the connection, we are necessarily in a position, from se tain well known reasons. where by an expression of opinion, if it should not accord a pre-eminence to the powers that be, we might "incur a torrent of in lignation;" yet duty calls but one way at a time, and the very fact that to intimidate, not only ourselves, but that actually deter others from a free expression of their views and wishes, of-

Then if the very tendency of all such combinations is to make a wider distinction in classes in society by adding to the charter for fear of individual consethe treasures of the already wealthy, by quences. virtue of the awent that rolls from the poor man's blow, there is room for an individual, or a community, to oppose the side of right, if, indeed, it should their formation, or ask the repeal of such come in contact with MIGHT. as are formed, without being amenable! In pursuance of a call, a large numto the charges preferred against Mr. ber of the citizens of Ironton, assembled Leet in said article. That such is the at the Court House, for the purpose of tendency we infer from all past experience. The United States Bank in its infancy was considered a safe and help-ful institution. But acquisition of powful institution. But acquisition of power naturally creates in the minds of those holding it, a desire for its exercise, that Chairman, and D. M. Seckler chosen grows with its growth, and strengthens with its strength, until they come to consider those extra privileges they enjoy, as natural rights, rather than acanired ones. So with the Bank, it assumed the prerogative of dictating in elections, and required the most energetic and hazardous efforts to resist its encroachments. "Torrents of indignation" burst forth, overwhelming and deterring and James Steece, as well as that of the by the Senate, during the executive sesthe timid, that only nerved the uplifted hand to strike the blow.
